“There are very, very few Catholic colleges or universities that can legitimately claim that they have the quality of academic programs and the authenticity of Catholic character that the University of Dallas possesses.”

DR. FRANK LAZARUS,
PRESIDENT OF THE
UNIVERSITY OF DALLAS

By far the most important journey you’ll undertake as a UD student is an inner exploration of your own faith. Spiritual life on our Catholic campus is truly lively, and its heart is the campus Church of the Incarnation, where students have the opportunity to attend daily Mass and to participate in liturgical ministries. The voices of UD’s beloved Collegium Cantorum, an a capella choir, enrich many liturgies. The choir, which has established quite a reputation in Europe, is devoted to preserving the traditional music of the Mass, mostly Latin sacred polyphony from the Middle Ages and later.

All students can become a part of the many volunteer community projects sponsored by UD’s active Campus Ministry, from Alternative Spring Breaks in Ecuador and Mississippi to the Family Day Carnival, which raises funds for local charities.

You might wonder if you “have to be Catholic” to benefit fully from UD’s spiritual character. Absolutely not – the entire UD community is united in exploring universal questions of truth and virtue. This process is only enriched by other perspectives.

Consider UD's post-graduate record.

"I believe it is truly providential that I wound up at the University of Dallas. It has been a life-transforming experience."

BRYAN ESPOSITO, JUNIOR
OMAHA, NEBRASKA

Our most recent graduating class is representative of UD graduates in general – about 80% of them are headed for graduate school, with the rest intent on beginning their careers immediately. Although often majors and post-graduate options match up as you might expect, just as often they don't: history and psychology majors head to business school, Spanish majors go to law school, and theology majors head to nursing school.

UD excels in pre-professional education: over 85% of pre-medical graduates are accepted by their first-choice medical school; over 90% of pre-law graduates are accepted by their first-choice law school.

UD graduates have earned prestigious awards, such as:

- Fulbright Scholarships
- Mellon Fellowships
- Truman Scholarships
- Howard Hughes Fellowships
