

Dear Name:

What are the most crucial departments at your company? Depending on your industry, the answers can vary widely, but most successful companies have the same core departments: sales, customer service, and marketing. What if I told you that accounting should be on that list? But more specifically, the accounts receivable and payable departments.

In markets that are often saturated with competitors, businesses are experiencing smaller and smaller profit margins year-to-year. To mitigate this loss, it is imperative to make the accounting department a profit center. How do you achieve this? By automating the accounts receivable and payable and improving the processes.

AO Logistics is your source for process improvement services. We have created an automated reconciliation and settlement management system. Our system has cut the overall process cost by 65% while maintaining top-quality work.
